COUNCIL REVISES CITY ORDINANCES

$3294 TAXES REPORTED

That Amount Collected in January—Sidewalk Petition Presented and Other Reports Passed on.

The revision and passing of two city ordinances, hearing of a petition for construction of a sidewalk, and the passing upon the quarterly financial report and reports of city departments, comprised the business transacted last night at the regular meeting of the city council. Mayor F. P. Robinson, and both councilmen, C. F. Remus and Harry Mutz, were present.

The city ordinance in regard to pool hall regulation was changed, one section being revised and three sections added. The ordinance now prescribes that upon conviction, for every person who shall operate any pool or billiard table without having a license, a penalty of not less than $50 fine or more than $400.

It also provides a punishment of $50 fine for each offense where a minor is permitted to play without a license. It then provides for any violation of provisions of the ordinance, in which no other penalties are provided, a fine of not less than $1 or more than $100, or a jail sentence of from one to ninety days, or both fine and jail sentence for each offense. These changes make the ordinance more specific and more stringent. In addition to the penalties prescribed for the above violations, the license may be revoked upon conviction. The revised ordinance goes into immediate effect.

Another was drawn up and passed in regard to the placing or hanging of posters and signs within the city limits. It is also a revision of a previous ordinance and more thoroughly governs all cases on the subject. It prohibits the posting, painting, tacking, pasting or otherwise attaching, signs, posters, cards, advertisments, etc., on the street, sidewalk or alley, except legal notices or signs for city purposes. The penalty provided for the violation is a fine of $1 to $100, or jail sentence of one day to ninety days, or both.

A petition for the city to construct a sidewalk on the north side of Halasey street between Buchanan and Fillmore streets, adjacent to Mrs. Dora Martin's property, was presented, signed by neighboring residents. The names on the petition were: F. M. Martin, G. D. Whaley, J. H. Thorp, O. A. Bennett, J. S. Hull, Mrs. J. S. Miller, E. T. Bailey, Harvey Miller, Miss Anna Kimple and Miss Mabel Martin. The city attorney was instructed to draft an ordinance preparatory to the construction of the walk.

The report of chief of police, E. E. Tilton, showed that $122.35 in fines had been collected during the month of January. The report of city collector, Geo. H. Meek, showed $2971.03 in current taxes and $323.05 in delinquent taxes, had been paid during January.

FORMER RESIDENT OF MARYVILLE WAS 88 YEARS OLD.

BURIED IN WASHINGTON

Word has been received of the death of Dr. Joseph B. Morrison, for many years a prominent physician of Maryville. His death occurred February 1 at the home of his daughter, Miss Grace Morrison, in New York City, after several years of invalidism. He was 88 years old and besides his widow and the daughter at whose home he died, is survived by a daughter, Miss Mildred Morrison of Dayton, Ohio, and a son, Paul Morrison of Chicago. He was buried with military honors on February 3 in the officers' scetion of the Arlington National cemetery in Washington, D. C.

THE COUNTY SCHOOL FILMS RECEIVE MORE RECOGNITION

Again Nodaway County gets into the limelight for one of its achievements. This time it is continued recognition of the unique production of the county school film, "And The Truth Shall Make You Free." Last week's issue of "Variety" a national motion picture newspaper, contained quite a long front page article with a Kansas City date line, on the Nodaway County films. The article was noticed by H. S. Kraft, of Kraft Attractions, New York, who sent Frank Buhler of the Stanley Company of Philadelphia, the clipping with the following letter:

"The next time any of these wise guys from the big cities pull a dirty crack about these small towns, let them pipe this from the front page of this week's Variety. Thus, plus Frank Buhler, Oklahoma Bob, (Bob Albright), Lynn Overman puts Maryville indisputably on the map."

Mr. Buhler, who is brother of Charles Buhler of Maryville, has sent the clipping from Variety. The article told of the work in filming the picture and stated that it would probably be shown in all parts of the country.

WRITEUP IN STAR ABOUT THE FILM

KANSAS CITY PAPER HAD ARTICLE ABOUT SCHOOL PICTURES.

MRS. WOODSON WRITES IT

Delivery of the Visual Message Creates Interest and a Desire for Advancement.

Mrs. Mary Blake Woodson, feature writes for the Kansas City Star and Times and editor of the Missouri Notes of the Kansas City Times had the following article in the Star last evening about the Nodaway County school films with pictures of the Mt. Tabor school and of Secretary George A. Pickens of the Chamber of Commerce and of Leslie G. Somerville, county superintendent of schools:

Why Nodaway County Has Set Up A Goal For Its Schools.

One hundred and thirty-four rural schools in the county.

Fifty-six rated as "standard," or good.

Only two rated as "superior,"

How The County Is Improving

A motion picture film has been made, showing conditions in twenty-two schools, some showing "before" and "after" improvements were attended. Others show interesting school activities.

By letting all the county see the film, a spirit of competitive community pride has been aroused, a "get together" feeling has been created over the county and a practical lesson in improving the little red school house has been taught in a visible and social way.

Maryville Mo., Feb. 7.—For a long long time the little red country school house has been exploited as a superior sort of place, where superior and eminently sensible, homespun things were taught, from spelling to morals. But with all due respect to the little red schoolhouses and the number of great and near-great they have cradled in their more or less draughty and unhygienic arms, and given eye-strain from their woeful lack of windows, and typhoid from their drinking water and other insanitary conditions, there has also been a sneaking suspicion that the praises of the little red schoolhouse were romance promulgated by sentimental folk who remembered happy childhoods and somehow gave the red schoolhouse all the credit.

No doubt the little red schoolhouse was all right in its way, just as ox carts were excellent means of transportation before the motor car. But nowadays, the little red schoolhouse won't do. Unfortunately Missouri long has had an overdose of poor country schools and is just beginning to find it out. One of the first counties to realize this is Nodaway County, in the northwest part of the state.

Let Mules And Schools Compete

The only sleepy thing about Nodaway County is its name, and some time ago it decided it desired to be as famous for its schools as for its mules. How well it is succeding was demonstrated January 17 at Maryville, the county seat, when the Nodaway County school film entitled "And the Truth Shall Make You Free," was shown to a tensely interested town and county audience—parents and relatives of the country district school children.

So far as is known, no such film was ever made or shown and it is an interesting experiment, not only for its novelty, but also for its promise

HARDING ASKS FOR O. K. ON DEBT PLAN

PRESIDENT DELIVERS MESSAGE IN PERSON TODAY

BILLS ARE INTRODUCED

Immediately Following Message to Both Houses—Money for Liberty Bond Retiremnts

Washington, Feb. 7.—President Harding decided this morning to deliver his message to congress on the British debt settlement in person instead of sending it by messenger to both houses, as he had previously planned. President Harding will address the joint session at 1 P. M. It is understood that his message will be about 2000 words in length.

Washington, Feb. 7.—President Harding today asked Congress to approve the settlement concluded with Great Britain on the payment of the 4 billion, six hundred million dollars debt, and coupled with his request an ardent plea for his ship subsidy bill now "watered" and facing almost certain defeat because of the inaction upon it in the Senate.

Overriding the orders of his physician, Harding, who has been convalescing from a severe cold, went in person before the joint assembly of the House and Senate, and read his message, seeking to drive home his arguments in person rather than let them be conveyed by the colorless recital of a reading clerk.

The President's address was one of the shortest ever delivered to Congress. It was strictly business-like. He left it to Congress as to what manner it would be ratified, either by resolution or repeal of the present debt funding law. He warned those who would seek to dispose of the money annually paid by Great Britain, especially the advocates of the soldier bonus measure.

"I am not unmindful of the fact," he said, "that suggestions have been made of the disposal of the anticipated payments. It is not necessary for me to remind Congress that the money is to be used in the retirement of Liberty Bonds."

He expressed his hopes that the agreement would be ratified without any strings attached to it. He gave great praise to Great Britain for its business-like manner of handling its obligations, which it is now undertaking to discharge. No harsh bargain with British government has been made, he said, and none had been attended. In discussing the agreement, he reminded his hearers of the untold calamity that might have followed, or might still follow, the failure of an agreement, the first to be made among a score of other debtors. Surely, he said, if the British had sanctioned the agreement in two short cabinet sessions, the Americans could not be less prompt in approval.

Owing to the suddenness of President Harding's decision to make his address in person, there were many vacant seats in the galleries when he began speaking at 1:05 this afternoon. The President finished speaking at 1:30.

Identical bills, providing acceptance of the debt agreement through the liberalization of the debt funding law, were introduced in the Senate by Senator Smoot, Republican of Utah, and Representative Burton of Idaho in the House, immediately after the address. The Smoot-Burton amendment not only authorizes approval of the British agreement, but authorizes the commission to proceed with negotiations with Italy, France and other debtor nations with a view of debt funding agreements on the same basis.

LESLIE G. SOMERVILLE.

THE CONFIDENCE OF YOUTH.

The confidence with which the young people of the present day think they are going to solve all problems has both its absurd and its inspiring features. They look at the world stirring with turmoil over international complications, industrial quarrels, religious controversies, etc. They think what a miserable mess the previous generations made of it, and they have firm faith that they are going to do better.

They are going to introduce new systems of diplomacy and labor relations and politics and religious faith that will do away with the old evils that have baffled and thwarted the world so long.

It is easy enough to laugh at these bouyant hopes. These young people of course fail to realize how deeply rooted in human nature the old evils are. They imagine that some new systems of laws or governments or philosophy are going to overturn the world at once. Older and wiser heads realize that progress is a plant of slow growth. Most of the so-called new ideas have been tried out in past generations and have proved more or less defective.

And yet it is true that every generation that comes on the scene does succeed in lifting humanity to a higher level. The confidence and enthusiasm of youth supplies a tremendous energizing power. If the world was left solely to conservative people, it would keep going round and round in the same rut.

Only youth must have some respect for age and experience. The conservative with all his faults keeps the world from rushing into many rash and destructive follies. The world needs both the boundless hope and confidence of youth, and the prudent foresight of age, which has seen many hopeful ideas prove valueless. By combining the two elements, the race gradually attains a higher level.

PEACE IN THE COAL FIELDS.

It was good news for the American people that a peace agreement had been signed between bituminous coal operators and miners in three leading coal prdoucing states, which probably means that an agreement will be reached in other localities where a strike was threatened. Thus one of the greatest menaces against American prosperity for 1923 has been removed.

There will not be full satisfaction with the agreement that has been reached. It does not provide the cheaper coal for which the people are clamoring.

But wages are only one factor in the high price of coal, and the public can not take any positive steps toward better conditions in this industry until the federal coal commission makes it report. If that body offers a plan for reorganization that seems rational, the public should insist that the same be accepted by all parties.

If the United States will insist on Europe behaving herself until the last war is paid for, we will have a long term of peace.

The best thing about February is that it is a short month and comes in the winter time. The short days are also in winter it may be noted and the long

COL. HASKELL TAKES OVER GREEK RELIEF.

(Red Cross Courier.)

The Central Coordinating Committee for the Relief of Refugees in Greece has recently issued its first monthly report, according to advices to National Headquarters from Dr. A. Ross Hill, Vice Chairman in Charge of Foreign Operations, who has been directing the American Red Cross work from Athens. The report covers the work for refugees done by all organizations and the Greek government since the Smyrna disaster to Dec. 15, 1922. A careful reading of it shows that the American Red Cross has done much more than all other relief organizations combined, and at present is doing more than all others combined, including the Greek Government.

Dr. Hill stated that he was preparing a report on American Red Cross work as of Jan. 15, 1923, covering a period of two months, the Athens American Relief Committee having functioned for the Red Cross until the middle of November, while personnel, supplies, etc., were being assembled.

The direction of the relief work was on Jan. 23, turned over to Lieut. Col. William N. Haskell, American Red Cross Commissioner to Greece, Dr. Hill cables, with the field centers supplied with food to last a month and the warehouses at Piraeus well stocked. The clothing, shoes and blankets have nearly all been distributed, but new shipments were expected immediately. Dr Hill remained in Athens to assist Col Haskell, and planned to leave that city soon.

Another recent communication from Dr. Hill stated that the Red Cross medical program was going for ward rapidly. "If we can move fast enough in the direction of disease prevention," wrote Dr. Hill, "we shall not need as many beds as we have ordered for general hospitalization. Also, if we can escape an epidemic of typhus for another month we can count ourselves 'out of the woods' in that particular disease. Of course, we cannot predict what may happen yet in this camp life of dirty refugees, who have to be forced to bathe 'at the point of the bayonet,' but by the time Col. Haskell has taken charge he will be able to mark off typhus from his table of possible epidemices, if we can stave it off a short time longer."

A cablegram received Jan. 18 says that the health situation in Eastern Greece shows improvement, the problem around Arta and the Ionian Islands still being serious, but making progress.

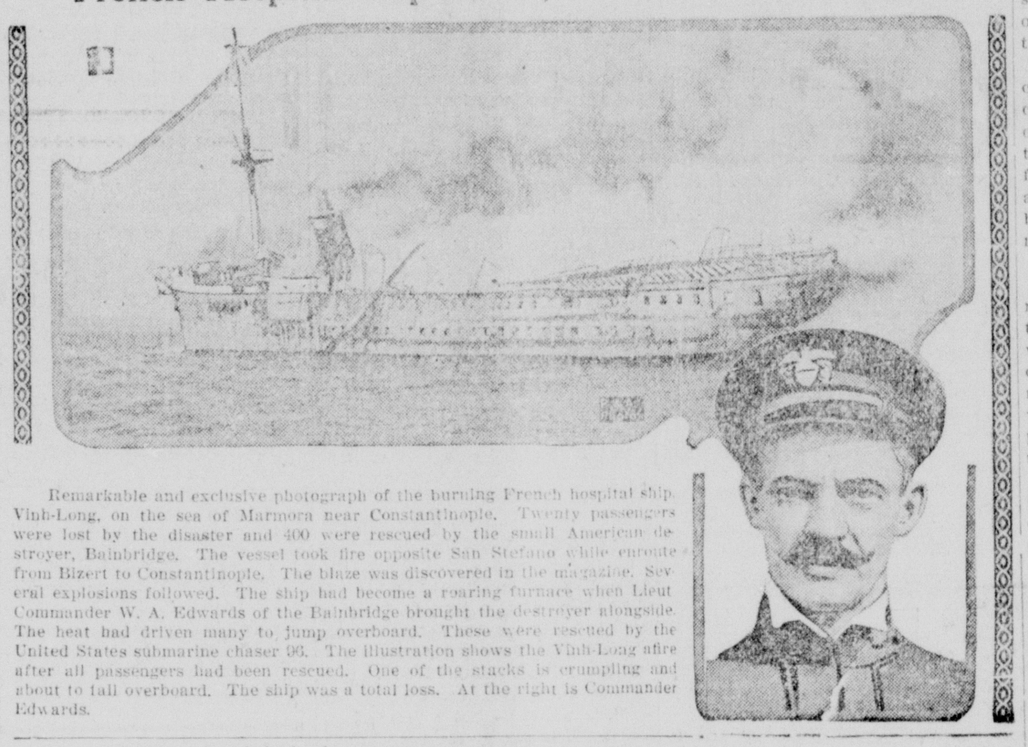
French Hospital Ship Burns; Yankee Crew to Rescue



Remarkable and exclusive photograph of the burning French hospital ship, Vinh-Long, on the sea of Marmora near Constantinople. Twenty passengers were lost by the disaster and 400 were rescued by the small American destroyer, Bainbridge. The vessel took fire opposite San Stefano while enroute from Bizert to Constantinople. The blaze was discovered in the magazine. Several explosions followed. The ship had become a roaring furnace when Lieut Commander W. A. Edwards of the Bainbridge brought the destroyer alongside. The heat had driven many to jump overboard. These were rescued by the United States submarine chaser 96. The illustration shows the Vinh-Long afire after all passengers had been rescued. One of the stacks is crumpling and about to fall overboard. The ship was a total loss. At the right is Commander Edwards.

BISHOP DEFENDS DEATH PENALTY

ENGLISH CLERGYMAN FAVORS CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

SHOULD APPLY TO WOMEN

If They Are Able To Commit Such Crimes, They Should Pay Same Penalty.

By David M. Church.

London, Feb. 7.—Capital punishment has found a champion in Bishop Welldon.

Since the hanging of Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywatres, convicted of the murder of Mrs. Thompson's husband, there has been a constant and growing agitation throughout England for the abolition of capital punishment.

"There seems to be an epidemic of crime," said Bishop Welldon in discussing the agitation which is going on. "It is probably due to the reaction of war. Society is bound to defend itself against malefactors. Old attacks upon capital punishment are being faint renewed, though the renewal is faint hearted.

Penalty Deserved.

"Looking at the most recent of all murders, I cannot escape the feeling that no punishment short of death would have satisfied the moral sense of righteousness in the heart of the nation. To take even a worse case, what other punishment could have proved even approximately equal to the crimes of a man like Landru?

"Moral indignation is a sound element in the life of the nation, nor can I doubt capital punishment acts as a deterrent to crime, not so much crimes committed under the sudden impulse of strong passion, but as making men and women hesitate before yielding to passions exciting them to murder.

Women Not Immune.

"There has been a strong prejudice against the infliction of capital punishment upon women, but it is not a prejudice justified by reason.

"If women are capable of crime as bad as men the same punishment is due equally with men. They must be ready not only to enjoy the advantages but to accept the penalties of such equality."

Bishop Welldon's defense of capital punishment, and particularly punishment for women, has caused a mild commotion in circles opposed to capital punishment, and numerous answers to his arguments have flooded the newspaper offices.

The Casting Out of Jimmy Myers

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

IT SEEMED a cruel thing to do, but we had to do it. For ours is ordinarily a quiet office. We have never had a libel suit. We have had fewer fights than most newspaper offices have, and while it hardly may be said that we strive to please, still in the main we try to get on with the people, and tell them as much truth as they are entitled to for ten cents a week. Naturally, we do our best to get up a sprightly paper, and in that the Myers boy had our idea exactly. He was industrious; more than that, he tried with all his might to exercise his best judgment, and no one could say that he was careless; yet everyone around the office admitted that he was unlucky.

We took him from the college at the edge of town. He had been running the college paper for a year, and knew the merchants around town fairly well; and, since he was equipped as far as education went, he seemed to be a likely sort of a boy for reporter and advertising solicitor.

One of the first things that happened to him was a mistake in an item about the opera house. He said that a syndicate had taken a lien on it. What he meant was a lease, and as he got the item from a man who didn't know the difference, and as the boy stuck to it that the man had said lien, and not lease, we did not charge that up to him. A few days later he wrote for a town photographer a paid local criticising some one who was going abroad the county peddling picture frames and taking orders for enlarged pictures. That was not so bad, but it turned out that the peddler was a woman, and she came with a rawhide and camped in the office for two days waiting for Jimmy, while he came in and out of the back door, stuck his copy on the hook by stealth, and traveled only in the alleys to get his news. One could hardly say that he was to blame for that, either, as the photographer who paid for the item didn't say the peddler was a woman, and the boy was not a clairvoyant.

One dull day he wrote a piece about a gang who played poker at night in Red Martin's room. Jimmy said he wasn't afraid of Red Martin, and he wasn't. The item was popular enough and led to a raid on the place, which disclosed our best advertiser sitting in the game. To suppress his name meant our shame before the town; to print it meant his—at our expense. It was embarrassing, but it wasn't exactly the boy's fault. It was just one of those unfortunate circumstances that come up in life. However, the advertiser aforesaid began to hate the boy.

He must have been used to injustice all his life, for there was a vertical line between his eyes that marked trouble. The line deepened as he went further and further into the newspaper buiness; for, generally speaking, a person who is unlucky has less to fear handling dynamite than he has writing local items on a country paper.

A few days after the raid on the poker room Jimmy, who had acquired a particularly legible hand, wrote: "The hem of her skirt was trimmed with pink crushed roses," and he was in no way to blame for the fact that the printer accidentally put an "h" for a "k" in skirt, though the woman's husband chased Jimmy into a culvert under Main street and kept him there most of the afternoon, while the cheering crowd informed the injured husband whenever Jimmy tried to get out of either end of his prison.

The printer that made the mistake bought Jimmy a new suit of clothes, we managed to print an apology that cooled the husband's wrath, and for ten days, or perhaps two weeks, the boy's life was one round of joy. Everything was done promptly, accurately and with remarkable intelligence. He whistled at his work and stacked up more copy than the printers could set up in type.

He told us in confidence that he never felt festive and gay that something didn't happen. He was not in the building that evening when the paper went to press, but after it was printed and the carriers had left the office he came in singing: "She's My Sweetheart, I'm Her Beau," and sat down to read the paper.

Suddenly the smile on his face withered as with frost, and he handed the paper across the table to the bookkeeper, who read this item:

Died—Mrs. Lillian Gilsey.

Prepare for the hot weather, my good woman. There is only one way now; get a gasoline stove of Hurley & Co., and you need not fear any future heat.

And it wasn't Jimmy's fault. The foreman had merely misplaced a head line, but that explanation did not satisfy the bereaved family.

Jimmy was beginning to acquire a reputation as a joker. People refused to believe that such things just happened. They did not happen before Mr. James Myers came to the paper—why should they begin with his coming and continue during his engagement? Thus reasoned the comforters of the Gilseys, and those interested in our downfall. The next day the "Statesman" wrote a burning editorial denouncing us "for an utter lack of all sense of common decency" that permitted us "to violate the sacredest feeling known to the human heart for the sake of getting a ribald laugh from the unthinking." We were two weeks explaining that the error was not the boy's fault.

The summer wore away and the dog days came. The Democratic state campaign was about to open in our town, and orators and statesmen assembled from all over the Missouri valley. There was a lack of flags at the dry goods stores. The Fourth of July celebration had taken all the stock. The only materials available were some red bunting, some white bunting, and some blue bunting with stars upon it. With this bunting the committee on reception covered the speakers' stand, wrapping the canopy under which the orators stood in the solid colors and the star-spangled blue. It was beautiful to see, and the pride of the window-dresser of the Golden Eagle Clothing store. But the old soldiers who walked by nudged one another and smiled.

About noon of the day of the speaking the city clerk, who wore the little bronze button of the G. A. R., asked Jimmy if he didn't want someone to take care of the Democratic meeting. Jimmy, who hated politics, was running his legs off to get the names of the visitors, and was glad to have the help. He turned in the contributed copy without reading it, as he had done with the city clerk's articles many times before, and this is what greeted his horrified eyes when he read the paper:

"Under the Stars and Bars"
Democracy Opens Its State Campaign Under the Rebel Emblem Today
A Fitting Token
Treasonable Utterances Have a Proper Setting

And then followed half a column of most violent abuse of the Democrats who had charge of the affair. Jimmy did not appear on the street that night, but the next morning, when he came down, the office was crowded with indignant Democrats "stopping the paper."

Jimmy had a peculiar knack of getting up little stories of the town—not exactly news stories, but little odd bits that made people smile without rancor when they saw their names in the quaintly turned items. One day he wrote up a story of a little boy whose mother asked him where he got a dollar that he was flourishing on his return with his father from a visit in Kansas City. The little boy's answer was that his father gave it to him for calling him uncle when any ladies were around. It was merrily spun, and knowing that it would not make John Luck, the boy's father, mad, we printed it, and Jimmy put at the head of it a foolish little verse of Kipling's. Miss Larrabee, at the bottom of her society column, announced the engagement of two prominent young people in town. The Saturday paper was unusually readable. But when Jimmy came in after the paper was out he found Miss Larrabee in tears, and the foreman leaning over the counter laughing so that he couldn't speak. It wasn't Jimmy's fault. The foreman had done it—by the mere transposition of a little brass rule separating the society news from Jimmy's story with the Kipling verse at the head of it. The rule tacked the Kipling verse onto Miss Larrabee's article announcing the engagement. Here is the way it read:

"This marriage, which will take place at St. Andrew's church, will unite two of the most popular people in town and two of the best-known families in the state.

"And this is the sorrowful story
Told as the twilight fails,
While the monkeys are walking together,
Holding each other's tails!"

Now, Jimmy was no more to blame than Miss Larrabee, and many people thought, and think to this day, that Miss Larrabee did it—and did it on purpose. But for all that it cast clouds over the moon of Jimmy's countenance, and it was nearly a year before he regained his merry heart.

But as the months rolled by he became calm, and when Governor Antrobus died, Jimmy got up a remarkably good story of his life and achievements, and though there was no family left to the dear old man to buy extra copies, all the old settlers—who are the hardest people in the world to please—bought extra copies for their scrapbooks. We were proud of Jimmy, and assigned him to write up the funeral. That was to be a "day of triumph in Capua." There being no relatives to interfere, the lodges of the town—and the governor was known as a "jiner"—had vied with one another to make the funeral the greatest rooster-feather show ever given in the state. The whole town turned out, and the foreman of our office, and everyone in the back room who could be spared was at the governor's funeral. We put a tramp printer on to make up the paper, and told Jimmy to call by the undertaker's for a paid local which the undertaker had written for the paper that day.

Jimmy's face was beaming as he snuggled up to his desk at three o'clock that afternoon. He said he had a great story. Trusting the foreman to read the proof, Jimmy rushed out to get from a United States senator who was attending the funeral an interview on the sugar scandal, for the Kansas City Star.

The rest of us did not get back from the cemetery until the carriers had left the office, and this is what we found:

"The solemn moan of the organ had scarcely died away, like a quivering sob upon the fragrant air, when the mournful procession of citizens began filing past the flower-laden bier to view the calm face of their beloved friend and honored townsman. In the grief-stricken hush that followed might be heard the stifled grief of some old comrade as he paused for the last time before the coffin.

"At this particular time we desire to call the attention of our readers to the admirable work done by our hustling young undertaker, J. B. Morgan. He has been in the city but a short time, yet by his efficient work and careful attention to duty, he has built up an enviable reputation and an excellent custom among the best families of the city. All work done with neatness and dispatch. We strive to please.

"When the last sad mourner had filed out, the pall-bearers took up their sorrowful task, and slowly, as the band played the 'Dead March in Saul,' the great throng assembled in the street viewed the mortal remains of Governor Antrobus start on their last journey."

Of course it wasn't Jimmy's fault. The "rising young undertaker" had paid the tramp printer, who made up the forms, five dollars to work his paid local into the funeral notice. But after that—Jimmy had to go. Public sentiment would no longer stand him as a reporter on the paper, and we gave him a good letter and sent him onward and upward. He took his dismissal decently enough. He realized that his luck was against him; he knew that we had borne with him in all patience.

The day that he left he was instructing the new man in the ways of the town. Rev. Frank Milligan came in with a church notice. Jimmy took the notice and began marking it for the printer. As the door behind him opened and closed, Jimmy, with his head still in his work, called across the room to the new man: "That was old Milligan that just went out—beware of him. He will load you up with truck about himself. He rings in sermons; frots around with church social notices that ought to be paid for, and tries to get them in free; likes to be referred to as doctor; slips in mean items about his congregation, if you don't watch him; and insists on talking religion Saturday morning when you are too busy to spit. More than that, he has an awful breath—cut him out; he will make life a burden if you don't—and if you do he will go to the old man with it, and say you are not treating him right."

There was a rattling and a scratching on the wire partition between Jimmy and the door. Jimmy looked up from his work and saw the sprightly little figure of Parson Milligan coming over the railing like a monkey. He had not gone out of the door—a printer had come in when it opened and shut. And then Jimmy took his last flying trip out of the back door of the office, down the alley, "toward the sunset's purple rim." It was not his fault. He was only telling the truth—where it would do the most good.

for the future. It is entirely a home-grown product, and represents five thousand feet of real accomplishment, bought and paid for by the Nodaway County schools for their own benefit. Incidentally, it was also bought and paid for by the sweat of the brows of George A. Pickens, secretary of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce; Leslie G. Somerville, earnest and hard-working county school superintendent; F. R. Marcell, film maker, who drove almost one thousand miles in three months over Nodaway's thirty square miles to make the film.

Parade Gave The Idea.

The idea for such a film dates back to the preparation for "school day" at Maryville last October, which day Maryville considers the most wonderful in her history—a day when four thousand rural school children marched through her streets and a large number of floats, some of which had come twenty miles dressed to enter, competed for prizes offered by the Maryville Chamber of Commerce. Moving pictures were taken of the parade and the Chamber of Commerce offered twenty feet of moving picture film free to the rural high schools putting on entertainment in the evening. This started the film's growth, but its real purpose was deeper—to get the county folks pulling together for good schools.

"You see," explained Mr. Somerville, "in 90 per cent of cases one dislikes a person because one doesn't know that person. Closer acquaintance means real friendships. We want Nodaway countians to like each other and stand for the best in schools."

The first result was that each of the high schools that had won twenty feet of film, and some that didn't contracted for as much as three hundred feet, altough it cost about $17 to produce every fifty feet. Then the schools earned the money to pay for it by giving socials, bazaars, pie suppers and other entertainments.

Work Stirs Community Interest.

Other schools followed suit. The film soon became a sort of county child, in whom all had a personal interest. This quickly developed a splendid county spirit. Interest in the film even brought together communities divided by church rows.

A spirit of friendly rivalry was also induced. It was both touching and prophetic to sit in the crowded auditorium the night that the wonderful film was being shown and hear the enthusiastic shy ripples of applause here and there as this or that particular school and its activities were flashed on the screen. It was also a delightful, intimate thing to see the pride on the beaming faces, to hear the real music the Maryville High School orchestra made and see how the state teachers' college co-operated.

Besides pictures of the parade on School day and of all departments of Maryville's school and teachers' college, the film includes pictures of more than twenty-two rural schools and their activities.

Consolidated School A solution?

Judging by the pictures of the four consolidated district schools, Excelcelsior, Ravenwood, Elmo and Parnell, consolidation seems to be the solution for the right sort of rural schooling wherever it is possible. Superintendent Somerville strongly advocates consolidation, not only because pooling the school money of several districts gives a better chance for a modern building, modernly equipped and with better paid teachers, but also because it consolidates a community interest and causes better county feeling.

Consolidation is voted by those concerned, administered by a board of those concerned and insures not only a common grade school education to every pupil, which is the most the little red school house ever offered, but also a modern high school education.

The film revealed that the motor car and bus apparently have solved the transportation problem by following regular routes and gathering up the children in the morning and returning them to their homes at night. At Ravenwood, a consolidation of six districts, two of the old schools still are used for lower grade purposes, but children from the four other districts are tranported at a cost of about $4.50 a month per pupil. The consolidation gave enough money to build a new building, pay the teachers more and add a commercial course, domestic science and some junior high school work to the regular high school course.

Elmo, a consolidation of five districts, obtained a fine building at Possum Walk, added another teacher and domestic science, a course important to the rural girl. The other consolidated schools show equal accomplishments.

Labelle And Mount Tabor "Superior."

Two of the small schools which have an honored place in the film are Labelle and Mount Tabor, the only "superior" schools in the county. As shown, they have modern, efficient small buildings, properly lighted and ventilated, neatly painted and amazingly shipshape, standing lonesomely in a wide parairie.

The little schoolhouse at Gaynor exposed its former faults in the film, to point the moral of later improvement. The first picture showed it as used to be, poorly lighted from two small front windows, and three of its students wearing glasses. The second showed it with six windows added on one side, making the light fall over the left shoulders of the pupils.

Glendale showed how its eighteen pupils came at least three miles every day on horseback and how a big barn is maintained for the care of their steeds. Dismissal there looks much like a cavalry troop going off duty.

In the film there are two outstanding revelations, the hold that physical training and athletics have taken on rural districts and the way "vitalized agriculture" has permeated them. "Vitalized agriculture" is a sort of glorified manual training especially adapted to teach pupils not only manual training, but also to make them more independent on the farm. Cement making and laying, cabinet making, rope making and splicing, knot tying, woodworking and many other things are included. The girls learn it, too, showing a new phase of feminine independence.

Guilford high school showed a complete playgrond equipment, made by its pupils, and Lafayette school proudly flaunted clever merchanical wooden toys, made by its smallest children. Pleasant View showed its boys and girls busily making drinking cup stands for cups that hold the pure water that now is required of every Nodaway rural school.

All Interested in Athletics.

As for athletics, many of the schools showed they were equipped with phonographs and that they take "setting up" exercises to music and Loraine School adds regular military drill. Nearly every school proudly exhibited basket and football teams and lively games of hockey and other strenuous outdoor exercise. A tug of war to typify what happens when people don't pull together, and a basket ball team were the sole offerings of a little school named soundly Common Sense. A surprising number of school orchestras were in evidence also.

"Their interest is best of it all," said Mr. Pickens, secretary of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce. "The idea back of School Day, of course, was, besides better schools, to help bring about in the county the same friendly, brotherly spirit we have in Maryville. The school film is not a money-making scheme, and we will not show it any place without having this understood. We will show our film only where there is a big neighborly get-together feeling. We won't be first aids to pie suppers."

"And there isn't any place we can't take the school film and show it as far as location is concerned," chimed in the indefatigable Mr. Somerville. "We can load film and moving picture machine in a motor car and take it to any church, school or house, no matter how remote. By jacking up the car and letting one wheel revolve we can generate enough electricity to operate the machine. The showing is often to persons who never have seen a moving picture and who wouldn't know what you meant if you spoke of community spirit, but are so delighted to see some neighbor doing something worth while that they soon become enthusiastic."

There are about 134 rural schools in Nodaway County. Only fifty-six of these are "standard" and only two "superior." About twenty-two of them were represented in the school film which probably will be taken, free of charge, to every one of the 134 in time. This means 134 chances for improvement per visual suggestion.

And so this same quaint coalition of modernity and rurality represents the most sensible, typical, sturdily American thing possible to imagine, and it is to be hoped will be the beginning of many journeys of many Mahomets to many mountains throughout the state and presently the country. If it does, all credit will certainly belong to Nodaway County, Missouri, whose jacked-up motor car took the school film to out-of-the-way places unconsciously hungry for its message and which stood for real advancement and first started a unique movement, certainly in the right direction.

Women know what they want --and get it

A woman buys many different food products, dozens of fabrics and articles of apparel, shoes, things for the home, toilet preparations—quite probably in a year she makes a thousand purchases. Personally to judge the quality of each, she would need to be a chemist, an engineer, a metallurgist and a good many other things.

So, given the choice, of course she buys the goods she knows in preference to those she does not know. And she is going to have that choice for a good many years. She is boss.

Manufacturers who want to work for her must realize this:—They must put in their application at once; convince her of their intention and ability to give her merchandise of known value; and then live up to the standard.

For she is a just but ruthless boss. She neither forgets nor forgives. She rewards loyal service with loyalty, but her condemnation of broken faith is final.

COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL TO STAGE BASKETBALL TWIN-BILL

Friday Night in High School Gym, Tarkio High and Mo. Valley Will be Foreign Foes

A double-header basketball program has been arranged for Maryville fans for Friday night at the High School gymnasium. The High School five will meet their old rivals, Tarkio, and one of the best exhibitions of the season is expected. The College Bearcats will meet the Missouri Valley quintet in their second home game of the season. Not much advance dope is available on the record of the Marshall team this year. It is probable that Ellis, Bearcat guard, will be out of the game owing to injuries received in the Drury game at Springfield. No referee has been selected for the games yet and it is not known which will be played first. The first game will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

While the boys are meeting foes on the home courts, the girls' teams of both schools will journey forth for conflicts on foreign courts. The High School girls will play a return game with Roscadale High School, and the college Kittycats will play at Fayette. Central and Howard Payne have consolidated this year and a close game is expected there. It was Howard Payne, who last year, came so neatly beating the Kittycats.

MORE RELIGIOUS WORKERS NEEDED SAYS S. WILLIAMS

State Sunday School Man Talks This Morning At State Teachers College Assembly.

"What the country needs more than anything else is a larger number of religious workers," said Sterling Williams, state Sunday School man, in a speech made this morning at the State Teachers College in the interest of the meeting of workers from the different colleges of the state which will be held at Columbia February 16, 17, 18.

Mr. Williams emphasized the fact that the reason that more people are not reached in religious channels is the lack of trained instructors in Sunday Schools and in Daily Vacation Bible Schools. He also impressed the fact that it would not be long before a means of training these teachers would be established.

That a number of schools and colleges are installing chairs of religious education was brought out by the speaker. He also told of the number of high schools that were giving from two to four periods a week for instruction in religious subjects.

The State Teachers College is allowed ten delegates to the meeting at Columbia. This morning the students body elected a committee composed of Dr. Fred Keller, Miss Marie Landfather and Richard Runyan to select these delegates. A faculty representative will also be selected.

FISTIC SPORT INTRODUCED IN HIGH SCHOOL AG. SHOP

After 3:30 Boys Go Down, Turn Workshop into Battling Arena and Hold Exciting Bouts

Nearly every evening, after school has adjourned, there can be seen a number of high school boys all going the same direction, Now when a number of boys are seen going somewhere, it is a pretty safe bet that something is going to happen. So, if it is observed as to where they are heading, it will be noticed that they all enter the shop room of Mr. Tilley's agriculture department. Here, after having assembled a set of boxing gloves is brought forth. Immediately there arises a series of challenges, excuses or persuasions. Two boys are soon picked out of the crowd ,and the gloves are thust up on their hands. A space is then cleared and the bout is on.

Some of the fights are fast, some are slow, some are exciting and some are funny, some show a great deal of skill on the part of the boxers, and others are clumsy, "knockdown-drag-out" affairs, and once in a while some blood is drawn. However, no matter what kind of a bout is staged, it is enjoyed by all, and no hard feelings are incurred. The period spent in this recreation is one where everything else is forgot, and a good time is had by all.

Verily the agriculture shop is a popular place, after three-thirty.

LICENSE FEES AVAILABLE FOR ROAD UPKEEP

Money Collected From Car Owners Can Be Used for Highways, Assistant Otis Says.

Jefferson City, Feb. 7—A decision was handed down yesterday by Merrill Otis, assistant attorney-general, stating that money collected from automobile licenses may be used for the maintenance of the state road system, after a sufficient amount has been deducted to cover the cost of operating the automobile license department. This money may be made available before the $60,000,000 road bonds are paid off.

A bill was introduced in the House late Monday afternoon by J. R. Cary and H. S. Bales, providing for a general system of "feeder" roads throughout the state and to connect up the various state roads. A tax levy of 2 cents on the $100 valuation is carried with the bill.

W. L. Steiner introduced a bill which would prohibit the killing of quail except for food. This bill also provides that 200 voters of any county may petition the County Court to call a special election for the purpose of voting a closed season on quail.

T. J. Roney introduced a prohibition bill which, among other things, provides that any officer of the law who fails to enforce the prohibition law, shall be removed from office. Also, when a still is captured it shall be so mutilated as to render it useless for the manufacture of liquor and then sold as junk and the money turned over to the school fund.

M. A. O'Donnell and P. M. Donnelly introduced a measure which limits the salaries or fees paid to any municipal official in Missouri to $10,000.

Would Have Co-Operative Stores

H. O. Maxey introduced a bill providing for the formation and regulation of farmer's co-operative stores. It provides that these stores shall be licensed and supervised.

R. L. Hains introduced a bill which would regulate the types of roads to be constructed by the State Highway Department in accordance with the location of the road and the amount of traffic passing over it.

E. E. Penzel introduced a bill in the Senate yesterday afternoon placing all county clerks on a salary instead of a fee basis.

S. M. Snodgrass introduced a measure which would make it possible for the state treasurer to handle school and library funds. This money is now handled and regulated by the State Board of Education.

W. W. Hamlin introduced a bill which provides that school playgrounds shall be available to school children throughout the entire year.

A. L. McCawley introduced a measure which provides that the people of any community must authorize the City Council to grant franchises to any public utility. If the rate agreed upon is changed at any time during the term of the franchise, the utility loses its franchise right.

Michael Kinney introduced a bill which provides that any person can carry $300 of insurance without medical examination.
